WILLIAM CROCKETT
(Monroe Co.,) S.E.Dist.

The remains of William Crockett are now resting in Oak View Cemetery under an appropriate marker. The transfer of the remains was made from an unmarked cemetery on the Collins farm about two miles south of Albia.

REVOLUTIONARY SOLDIERS BURIED IN IOWA----page 3.

Crockett was buried in the small cemetery in 1849. For many years the location of his grave was unknown, but through the efforts of Judge D. M. Anderson and the local chapter of the DAR, the grave was located and with the consent of the relatives the grave was opened and the remaining evidences of the war veteran were transferred to a place of permanence in Oak View Cemetery. The new grave is located just west of the entrance to the cemetery on the north side of the drive. Two hard maples provide suitable shade about the grave. A large boulder found in the south west part of the county is the marker. A copper plate upon which the history of this pioneer will be engraved is to be mounted on the boulder. The copper box in which the remains were buried contains a history of the life of Crockett which was written by Judge Anderson from the Revolutionary War records secured through the state historical department. Crockett came to Monroe county in 1844 with John Massey and David Rowles. He lived with John Massey until his death in 1849. The date of his birth is somewhat in doubt but Crockett was some place between 90 and 100 years old at the time of his death. Crockett enlisted as a private fourth class in the fourth battalion of Capt. Philip Mathias' Co. on Oct., 1777, according to War Records. This company was recruited as a part of the Cumberland Co., Pa. Militia. After serving in the Rev. War, Crockett was also enlisted in two Indian Wars. He served as sargeant in Capt. David Kennedy's Co. of volunteers. He enlisted in this outfit Sept. 23, 1793, and was discharged Nov., 19, 1793. He again enlisted on July 8, 1794, in Capt. John Arnold's Co. of Price's Bat. of mounted Kentucky Volunteers, serving in this Co. 112 days. Descendants of Crockett also think he served in the War of 1812. William Crockett was a cousin of Davy Crockett of Alamo fame.

Became a member of the 1st Militia Co., 5th Regt., while a resident of Coventry, Conn. in 1778. Born April, 1771, just seven years old. This is explained by the fact that very young boys were taken as members of the "Company of Alarm", being messengers. Daniel Dow, Sr. moved to Page County, Iowa, in 1857, walking across Iowa to this locality. As shown by the inscription on his monument, he died Febr. 7, 1860, aged 88 years, 9 months. Researched and proven by Mrs. W. E. Gaston, historian.

NATHANIEL FELLOWS
(Johnson Co.) S.E. District

Nathaniel Fellows was born in Dorchester, New Hampshire, in 1758. His father was Captain Samuel Fellows, also a Revolutionary soldier. Nathaniel enlisted at the age of seventeen and served as a private in Col. Bedell's New Hampshire Regt. This particular regiment had been raised by an order of Congress for an "Expedition against Canada". He also served as a private in Capt. Abraham French's Co. of New Hampshire troops on Great Island, Nov. 5, 1775. His name is last shown on a company payroll of Capt. Samuel Young's troops in February, 1778. When twenty-four years of age he married Mercy Flanders, a daughter of Jesse Flanders, also a Revolutionary soldier. They had one son, Nathaniel, Jr.

In the spring of 1837, Nathaniel Fellows, Jr., Nathaniel Fellows, Jr., his wife Polly and two daughters, Elizabeth and Judith, left New Hampshire to journey westward. They traveled by wagon train reaching Indiana that same summer. Nathaniel and his son were cobblers by trade, and they decided to remain in Indiana for the year to obtain enough money to continue their trip at a later date. The following spring they joined a forty ox-team and again headed west. The group crossed the Mississippi at Bloomington, now Muscatine, then followed the rough road through wild country into Johnson county. Traveling south along the east bank of the Iowa River they came to the place where the Iowa City airport is now located; a spot opposite Indian Lookout where Chief Poweshiek and his Sac and Fox Indians were encamped.

The Fellows family had hoped to ford the river but the swollen stream and swift current made this impossible. Fortunately the Indians were friendly and came to their rescue. For the sum of one dollar they took the group of five across the river in their canoe, one person at a time. The wagon was then dismantled and transferred piece by piece. The oxen were prodded by Nathaniel, Jr., until they reached the west bank. An entire day was spent in the crossing. Camp was made for the night. In the morning the Indians helped reassemble the wagon. The family moved on. Permission was granted to them by Chief Poweshiek to go into Indian Land which had not yet been opened to white settlers. At Clear Creek the family noticed the unusually clean water in the stream and the rich bottom land adjoining it, so they decided to make this place their home. A white trapper whom they located in a small hut near the creek, by the name of Bowen Wright, consented to help them build a cabin, and he supplied the little family with venison and other wild game. Soon the ground was broken and the planting of corn and potatoes was under way. The farm of 260 acres bears a distinction shared by no other piece of land in Johnson County; it was not entered by the United States Government at first; it was not claimed nor settled by squatters until the land was surveyed and opened for sale because it was an original grant from Chief Poweshiek to the family of Nathaniel Fellows.

In July of that same year, just two months after the new home was established, Nathaniel Fellows, now eighty years of age and weakened by the hardships of the two long journeys, became ill and died, the first white adult to die in Johnson County. A walnut tree was felled by his son, and with the help of his neighbor, Bowen Wright, planks, or "puncheon boards", were split from it. A coffin was thus made with the boards fastened together with wooden pegs. Interment was made at the northwest corner of this new claim. Years later when U. S. Highway 6 was laid through Coralville, it passed along the edge of the Fellows' grave, so that it now lies on the shoulder of the road. A permanent marker for the spot was obtained by the Nathaniel Fellows Chapter of the DAR and was dedicated in November, 1940. Congressman Thomas E. Martin was the main speaker at the ceremonies. Owing to the fact that the grave is now situated on a State Highway, it was presented by the Chapter to the State of Iowa, to be permanently maintained by the State under the supervision of the Highway Commission. The site was accepted for the State by Mr. L. M. Eicher, Iowa State Highway Commissioner.

CHARLES HARRY
(Cedar Co.) N. E. Dist.

Born Aug. 11, 1760, Frederick Co., Va. Died April--1843, Cedar Co., Iowa. Buried in Old Tipton Cemetery which no longer exists, thus there is no marker on actual grave. When the present school building was erected in 1925, it covered this site, which from 1841 to 1861 had served as a Community Cemetery. In the excavation for the basement, workmen came on the evidence of graves. Most of the remains of bodies were taken up and re-interred in the present Tipton Cemetery, known as the Masonic Cemetery. To mark the site of Charles Harry's burial place as a Revolutionary soldier, Open Prairie Chapter of DAR in 1944 placed a bronze tablet in the front entrance of the Tipton Community School building which now stands on the ground.

Charles Harry served in company of Capt. Cunningham at Fort Henry, 1782, and one month at Wallis Fort, April 18, 1782, under command of Lt. James Wilson. His name appears on Capt. Munn's Co., Washington Co. Militia. He volunteered in 1779, served 3 mo. in Capt. Mabray Evan's Co., in Col. Marshall's Penn. Regt. He volunteered in April 1780, served 6 mo. in same Co. and Regt. and in 1781, 4 mo. He served as Indian spy and as Pvt.

Charles Harry's wife, Barbara, whom he married in 1786, was born in 1766. After the death of her husband, she lived with her son in Cedar county. Mrs. Blanche Culver Cary, R.F.D., Tipton, Iowa, is a great granddaughter of Charles Harry.
